

Inaugural Issue of Global Journal of Cultural Studies

Dear Colleagues,

We are thrilled to announce that the inaugural issue 2022 of Global Journal of Cultural Studies is now available [<https://lifescienceglobal.com/pms/index.php/GJCS/issue/view/462>]. This issue features a diverse range of articles. They come from three continents—Africa, Asia, and Europe, covering a variety of topics that are sure to attract your interest. Two of them may need specifically mentioned here, one for its contemporary significance, another for its unique contribution. The article “Why is Russian Domestic War Propaganda So Effective” provides us with a serious analysis about the reason why the Russian-Ukrainian War has been actively supported by Russian population and how the Russian propaganda won its domestic effectiveness in the past months. In the meanwhile, the article “Asouzu’s Complementarism and Nietzsche’s Perspectivism: Implications for Cross-Cultural Philosophizing” presents us an inspiring comparison between two philosophers, Asouzu from Africa and Nietzsche from Europe. The ideas they hold respectively and the comparison itself will help to broaden our intellectual horizon.

Our goal with each issue is to provide valuable and thought-provoking content that advances the field and sparks new ideas. We believe this issue does just that and we are confident that you will enjoy reading it.

Access to the full issue is available on our website. You are requested to contribute to the current volume 2023 and submit your valuable article.

As always, we welcome your feedback and suggestions. Please do not hesitate to reach out to us with any questions or comments.

Prof. Dr. Yanming An
Editor-in-Chief
Clemson University
Global Journal of Cultural Studies